Dear Jim:

Despite my taking so long to express my thanks, I trust that you know how much I appreciate the contribution that you made to my recently completed graduate seminar at the Defense Intelligence School.

Your willingness to meet with the class is always of particular importance to my development of the student awareness of "The Development and Future of the Intelligence Community"--to quote the actual title of the seminar.

The students commented very favorably on what you had to say--which, I must admit, came as no surprise in view of your depth of knowledge in the program and budget field and your first hand experience in Community developments over the past several years.

I extend my deepest thanks for your support.

With every best wish for your future, however your plans work out.

Sincerely,

Jack E. Thomas
